The Decision.

Special to the Gazette.

DENVER, June 23.—The United States Circuit Court has delivered an opinion, holding that between the two companies, the A. T. & S. F. is entitled to be restored to possession and an order is to be served on the D. & R. G. for such restoration, and if it cannot restore, by reason of a receiver being in possession, that a return of its lessons be made; that the possession by receiver is subject to future consideration. The ground of the opinion is that whether Judge Bowen's order is legal or illegal it furnishes a pretext for acquiring possession; the order did not call in delivery. Judge Miller concurs. Express directions were given in the present case that no attempt should be made to interfere with the possession under the present orders, the only duty being to serve the writ on the D. & R. G. Co.

Proceedings in Judge Hallett's Court.

Special to the Gazette.

DENVER, June 23. Judge Hallett's decision was quite lengthy, and occupied half an hour before its delivery. It was entirely unexpected, as it had been generally understood that the filing of the record, and hearing upon the merits, would precede any final adjudication. However, when the judges took their seats, Judge Hallett immediately proceeded to deliver his opinion as to what he considered the law on the question of a writ of restitution, stating that so far as it appeared from the record in the case, which consisted of the sworn copies which Messrs. Teller and Reed had forwarded to El Norte for the purpose of filing, and which had been returned and endorsed as filed, the removal papers had been filed with U. F. Meyer, who was at one time clerk of the district court, on the 9th day of June, 1879; that the injunction was issued on the 10th; that the filing of these removal papers ousted the court of jurisdiction and therefore the writ of injunction was an unlawful process; that it further appeared by the papers before them that the D. & R. G., under this unlawful process got possession, and that they deemed it their duty to restore possession to the party who had in this manner been unlawfully ousted; that he had jurisdiction in the matter and should issue an order to that effect; that an order should now be issued which was to be prepared by the counsel for the A. T. & S. F., and submitted to the counsel on the other side to the effect that if no cause to shown within a period fixed, say three days, why possession should not be delivered. Judge Hallett dwelt upon the importance of a receiver, and said distinctly that nothing as to him had been adjudicated, but that it was a question for future consideration.

Justice Miller also delivered a verbal opinion in which he stated that he concurred in the views of Judge Hallett that the case was of a provable character and that if the process had been unlawfully used restitution could be granted. He stated further as his opinion that inasmuch as the removal papers had been filed before the injunction was issued the issuance of the writ subsequently was rendered void.

Subsequently argument was had upon the motion case, which was moved by Judge Grant; who dwelt at considerable length upon the power of the court to maintain a bill to prevent the execution of a mandate of the United States supreme court.

Judge Usher, in arguing for the D. & R. G., stated that the only point in the controversy remaining to be decided was one of a private character between two corporations of the state of Colorado, the Pueblo & Arkansas Valley R. R. Co. and the D. & R. G. Ry. Co., whereof the U. S. court had no jurisdiction whatever, and that they therefore could not stop the mandate of the court, but was bound to execute; that one of the points raised by the so called supplemental bill of the P. & A. V. R. R Co. involved a single question of a controversy between citizens of different states or of the construction of an act of congress or a constitutional question or any other matter whereof the U. S. court could properly take cognizance.

Mr Beckwith who had replied to the argument of Judge Grant made some assertions as to the manner of the D. & R. G. Co. which Judge Usher flatly and unequivocally denied. It is presumed that a decision as to the execution of this mandate will be rendered shortly.

WASHINGTON.

Proceedings of the Forty-Sixth Congress.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 23. Senator Wallace, from the committee on appropriations, reported the house continuing resolutions fixing the date of final adjournment, which the senate concurred in, fixing Wednesday, the 25th of June, at 5 p. m., instead of Tuesday, the 27th.

Senator Windom objecting to its present consideration, it went over till to-morrow.

After passing a few unimportant bills, an executive session was held.

HOUSE.

Under a call of states for bills for reference, many were introduced, mainly of a private character.

The president's secretary delivered the message in writing, vetoing the supplementary judicial bill, also announcing that he had signed the army bill.

President's Veto.

WASHINGTON, June 23. The following is the full text of the president's veto on returning the judicial expense bill to the house of representatives:

After a careful examination of the bill entitled, An act making appropriations for certain judicial expenses, I return it herewith to the house of representatives, in which it originated, with the following objections to its approval:

The general purpose of the bill is to provide for certain judicial expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, for which sum $2,600,000 is appropriated. These appropriations are required to keep in operation the general functions of the judicial department of the government; and if this part of the bill stood alone there would be no objections to its approval. It contains, however, other provisions to which I desire especially to ask your attention.

At the present session of congress, a majority of both houses, favoring a repeal of the congressional election laws, embraced in title 26 of the revised statutes, passed a measure for that purpose, as a part of the bill entitled An act making appropriations for legislative, executive and judicial expenses of the government for the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes.

Unable to concur with congress in that measure on the 29th of May last, I returned the bill to the house of representatives, in which it originated, without my approval, for that further consideration which the constitution provides on reconsideration. The bill was approved by less than two thirds of the house, and failed to become a law. The election laws, therefore, remain valid enactments, and the supreme law of the land, binding not only upon all who are charged with the duties and responsibilities of legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the government, it is not sought by the bill before me to repeal the election laws. Its object is to defeat the enforcement of the last clause of the first section, which is as follows: "And no part of the money hereby appropriated is appropriated to pay any salaries, compensation, fees, or expenses under or in virtue of title 26 of the revised statutes, or of any provision of said title 26 of the revised statutes. The foregoing clause relates to elective franchise, and contains laws now in force regulating congressional elections.

The second section of the bill reaches much further. It is as follows: Sec. 2. That sums appropriated in this act for all persons and public service embraced in its provisions are in full for such persons and public services for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1880, and no department or officers of the government shall, during the next fiscal year, make any contract, or incur any contract, or any liability for pay of money under any of the provisions of title 26 of revised statutes of the United States, authorizing the appointment or payment of any special deputy marshals for service in connection with the elections or on election day, until an appropriation sufficient to meet such contract or pay such liabilities shall have first been made by law. This section of the bill is intended to make extensive and essential changes in existing laws. The following are provisions of statutes on the same subject which are now in force:

Section 26. No department of the government shall expend in any one fiscal year any sum in excess of the appropriations made by congress for that fiscal year or involve the government in any contract for future payment of money in excess of appropriations.

Sec. 27. No contract or purchase on behalf of the United States shall be made unless authorized by law or is under an appropriation adequate to its fulfilment except in war and navy departments for clothing, subsistence, forage, fuel, and quarters, or transportation which, however, shall not exceed the necessities of the current year.

The object of these sections of the revised statutes is plain. It is, first, to prevent any money from being expended unless appropriations have been made therefor; and second, to prevent the government from being bound by any contract not previously authorized by law, except for certain necessary purposes in the war and navy departments. Under the existing laws a failure of congress to make the appropriations required for the execution of the provisions of election laws, would not prevent their enforcement. The right and duty to appoint general and special deputy marshals, which they provide for, would still remain, and the executive departments of the government would also be empowered to incur the requisite liability for their compensation. But the second section of this bill contains a prohibition not to be found in any previous legislation. It is designed to render election laws inoperative and dead letter during the next fiscal year. It is sought to accomplish this by omitting to appropriate money for their enforcement, and by expressly prohibiting the department of officers of the government from incurring any liability under any of the provisions of title 26, of the revised statutes, authorizing the appointment or payment of general or special deputy marshals for service on election days, until an appropriation sufficient to pay such liability shall have first been made.

The president is called on to give his affirmative approval to positive enactments which in effect deprive him of ordinary and necessary means of executing laws still left on the statute book and embraced within his constitutional duty to see that such laws are executed. If he approves of the bill and thus gives to such provisions the enactment the authority of law he participates in the curtailment of his means of securing that the laws be faithfully executed while the obligation of law and his constitutional duty remains unimpaired. The appointment of special deputy marshals is not made by a statute of a spontaneous act of authority on the part of any executive or judicial officer of the government, but is accorded as a popular right of citizens to call into operation the agency for securing the freedom of elections in any city or town having 20,000 inhabitants or upward. Section 2021 of the revised statutes puts it in the power of any twenty citizens of any city or town to require of the marshal of a district the appointment of these special deputy marshals. Thereupon the duty of the marshal becomes imperative and his performance will expose him to judicial mandate or punishment, or to removal from office by the President as circumstances and his conduct might require.

The bill now before me neither revokes this popular right of citizens, nor relieves the marshals of the duty imposed by law. I forbear to enter again upon any general discussion of the wisdom and necessity of election laws, or the dangerous and unconstitutional principle of this bill, and the power vested in congress to originate appropriations, involves the right to compel the executive to approve legislation which congress may see fit to attach to such bill, and under penalty of refusing the means needed to carry on the essential functions of the government. My views on these subjects have been sufficiently presented in special messages sent by me to the house of representatives during the present session. What was said in those messages I regard as conclusive to my duty in respect to the bill before me.

The arguments urging these communications against the repeal of the election laws, and against the rights of congress to deprive the executive of that separate and independent discretion and judgment which the constitution confers, and requires, are equally urgent in opposition to this bill. This measure leaves the powers and duties of the supervisors of the elections untouched. The compensation for these officers is provided for under permanent laws, and no liability for which an appropriation is now required, would, therefore be incurred by their appointment, but the power of the national government to protect them in the discharge of their duty at the polls would be taken away. States employ both civil and military power at elections, but by this bill even civil authority to protect congressional elections is denied to it. The object is to prevent adequate control by the United States over national elections by forbidding payment of deputy marshals, and officers, who are clothed with authority to enforce election laws. The fact that the laws are deemed objectionable by the majority of both houses of congress, is urged as a sufficient warrant for this legislation.

There are two lawful ways to overturn legislative enactments; one is their repeal, and the other by the decision of a competent tribunal against their validity. The effect of this bill is to deprive the executive department of the government of means to execute laws which are not repealed, which have not been declared invalid, and which it is therefore the duty of the executive of every other department of the government to obey and to enforce.

I have in my former message on this subject expressed my willingness to concur in suitable amendments for the improvement of election laws, but I cannot consent to their absolute and entire repeal, and I cannot approve legislation which seeks to prevent their enforcement.

(Signed.) RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

GENERAL NEWS.

A Dangerous Picnic.

CHICAGO, June 23.—A Bohemian Sunday School organization had a picnic yesterday at Silver Leaf Grove, a suburb of the city. Various gangs of drunken roughs were very troublesome to the party, so much in fact that the persons in charge of the picnic sent for a company of Bohemian sharp shooters to protect them. The latter arrived on the grounds at 6 o'clock in the evening and shortly after one of them had a quarrel with a turbulent fellow named Clark and gave him a good threshing and had him ejected from the grounds. Clark told his story to a big crowd outside and they immediately began hurling broken bricks, stones and other missiles at the picnic party. Lieutenant Ladiver of the sharp shooters had a long roll sounded and had the men formed in line with fixed bayonets, and charged the crowd outside the gate, until they fell back, and the grounds were cleared of the intruders and roughs. The latter kept on throwing stones among the picnickers, however, till the sharp shooters became so exasperated that they opened a deadly fire on the crowd, which it is said resulted in two or three regular volleys, Lieut. Ladevier having given the order to fire, and says his men fired only after great provocation. When the affair became known, two large squads of police were sent to the scene, and the entire company arrested and marched to the station house, where seventeen were then remanded, and the remainder of them released.

Flops of the Majority.

WASHINGTON, June 23. A caucus of the house of representatives to-day immediately after the reading of the president's message vetoing the bill making appropriations for the judicial expenses of the government, developed that there were three distinct propositions entertained by the majority as the most practicable to be pursued: The one having apparently the largest number of supporters contemplated a resolution fixing the time for adjournment sine die; and that another bill identical with the vetoed measure be passed and sent to the president; and if he should again return it without his approval, adjourn, and permit the bill to fail.

A second proposition was to pass a joint resolution extending till next January, the appropriations on the basis of the present, providing for judicial expenses, with the proviso that no portion of the money thus appropriated shall be used for the payment of deputy marshals or supervisors at elections; and in the event of the non approval of the president, to adjourn sine die.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—A Tucson, Arizona special says that a letter from a well informed person, dated Guaymas, June 13, says the commencement of the building of the Guaymas and El Paso railroad by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe company, awaits the approval of certain modifications in the concession heretofore made which is likely to delay the beginning of the work.

FOREIGN.

Prince Imperial's Successor.

LONDON, June 23.—A Paris dispatch says the embarrassment of the Bonapartists is increasing. Prince Pierre Bonaparte, who has been busy with talk, is putting forward the claims of Prince Victor Bonaparte to the imperial succession. In the Sunday issue of Pays, the Cassagnac admits that nothing has been officially decided, though perhaps a decision may be made in a few days. It is believed Rouher announced in ignorance of the will in favor of Prince Victor because he considered its validity doubtful unless Prince Jerome Bonaparte consents to waive his claims.

Prince Jerome is very reticent since his arrival in Paris, and is apparently waiting the action of Rouher. It is believed that Prince Jerome will agree to be a pretender himself or permit his son to become one. In the event of Prince Victor endeavoring to temporize, in not distinctly accepting the position, Bonapartists will probably fall back on Prince Charles Napoleon, president of the Corsican council. General Prince Charles is forty years of age. He has no sons or royal connections, and is a much less probable candidate than Prince Victor.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Complete anarchy prevails in Southern Epirus.

Major Cavagnoni has arrived at Simla and will start for Cabul in July. The Ameer will send an escort to Shikarpur to meet him.

A telegram from Callao states that the Peruvian ironclad turret ship Huascar bombarded Autofagasta and captured two Chilian transports. The Chilian man-of-war Cavadauga, was then stranded. There has been an undecisive engagement between the Huascar and Chilian ironclads.

IMPORTANT TO THE LADIES.

From time immemorial personal adornment has been practiced by the human race and the standard of civilization of any nation, ancient or modern, can with unerring certainty be determined by it. While it is most justifiable with men it is the absolute duty of woman to beautify her person by all the little arts which fashion, that true indicator of advancement, suggests. It is an old adage and a true one that to be out of the fashion is to be out of the world. There is no adornment so important as that of the head and none again so natural as the hair. Hence it is anticipated that our endeavors to place within the means of any lady to purchase the most beautiful head-dress of the day will be appreciated. We would call your attention then to the new coiffure, it being pronounced by all as the nicest head dress ever invented, and with which a lady can with ease dress her own hair in the most fashionable and becoming manner. Thanking those that have favored us with their work, and to those wishing our services in making anything to be had in a first-class hair establishment, we would say, call immediately as we only remain one week more. We are now offering bargains in switches. Real human hair switches, three stems, nearly one yard long, only $2.00.

JOB WORK.

Facilities for Plain and Fancy Job Printing equal to those of any establishment west of the Mississippi river.

The next statement of the A., T. & S. F. Co. will show a reducting of about $3,000 a day in the earnings.

The shippers are not in this fight, and there is no reason why they should be punished for the Atchison defeat.

We don't blame the A., T. & S. F. Co. for trying to get the road back. An income of $3,000 a day is not to be despised.

If the legislature was in session, and a church bill was under consideration, there might be a possibility of the A., T. & S. F. Co. getting the road back.

The writ of restitution will serve to cheer up the depressed spirits of the A. T. & S. F. party, and therefore cannot be said to have been issued entirely in vain.

From the present returns of the earnings of the D. & R. G. for local traffic, it is safe to conclude that the A., T. & S. F. were not stealing over $3,000 a day from our local road.

The Register-Call don't think much of Atchison lawyers and their affidavits. It says: "A few more lawyers, and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe will be kicked out of the state."

The Rocky Mountain Sentinel, published at Santa Fe, seems to understand the railroad situation in this state. It also sees the interest New Mexico has in the success of our local road.

Mr. Ewing says the currency question will be the prominent one of the Ohio campaign. Frank Hurd, a hard money democrat, says it will not, hence, advises hard money democrats to vote for Ewing. This party is alleged to have principles.

The Pueblo Democrat is usually gotten up with taste and judgment. But in Saturday's issue we noticed a religious notice and an Atchison notice mixed together. This is altogether too bad and brings up that unsavory reminiscence, the church bill.

If the democrats had wanted to put themselves right on the silver question they could have done so when Bayard offered his resignation. By accepting it and putting a silver man in his place, the Warner bill would have been before the senate in a regular way.

The writ of restitution might afford some satisfaction to the Atchison company if it were not for two things: First that Judge Hallett's court has only a concurrent jurisdiction with Judge Bowen's court, and secondly that the D. & R. G. Co. against whom the writ is issued has nothing to restore.

Teller and Hill will see the day in this state when they would cut off their right arms in order to expunge their recent record on the silver question. But the damned spot will not out. Denver News.

The News must believe that the population of this state will be all silver bullion holders or foolish, for no others will condemn the action of our senators.

The News is mistaken if it expects to make party capital out the silver question. It was a democratic committee on finance that buried the Warner silver bill, a democratic senate that refused to resurrect it, and a democratic caucus which declined to accept the resignation of Mr. Bayard, the chairman of the finance committe, and the one who secured the burial of the bill.

If the "banana line," simply to gratify a childish spite, chooses to inconvenience every shipper, it cannot expect any generous patronage from shippers. It is a fact that many of our shippers here have frequently patronized the A., T. & S. F. Co. simply because they liked the line, and it is a poor return to keep back the freight as they are now doing.

The latest dodge to make money out of the government is the passage of the bill in the house providing for the exchange of the standard for the trade dollar. A year ago, owners of bullion had it coined into trade dollars, which were worth about 87 cents, and managed to put them into circulation as containing 100 cents. This gave a clear profit of thirteen cents. The government puts a premium on this fraud by redeeming them. It is not different in principle from providing for the redemption of counterfeit money.

The Mining Record in criticising Senator Hill's vote on the silver bill says "No loyal friend of the restoration of silver to the money service of the country was capable of such an act." We want to add that the Record is not a judge of what a loyal friend of silver ought to do. It is a soft-money sheet whose opinions on the silver question exactly tally with those of the greenbackers who hold that silver and gold are the twin relics of barbarism. The Record is not, and never has been regarded as a friend of silver. Its financial views are on a par with Buck Pomeroy and Sam Cary and are entitled to just as much respect and no more.

The people of the state have generally come to the conclusion since the appointment of a receiver that the railroad question is settled. The Saguache Chronicle has been rather of a sympathizer with the Atchison company, though no one who knows Judge Felton, the editor, will for one moment believe that his opinions have been influenced by any unworthy motive. In the last issue of the Chronicle the opinion is expressed that "it may as well be accepted as an accomplished fact that the lease is broken and that henceforth the two roads are to be operated independently, each striving to outspeed the other in building extensions and opening up new country."

The last number of Harper's Weekly contained a very sensible article on the subject of Grant for a third term and quotes the following statistics:

"During the first two years of General Grant's term of the presidency the republicans had 170 members in the house of representatives 118 from all the states of the north, and 52 from the south while the democrats had but 67 members 40 from the north, and 27 from the south.

"During the last two years of General Grant's term the republicans had but 106 members in the house 90 from the north, and 16 from the south—while the democrats had 186 members 97 from the north, and 89 from the south.

"When General Grant began his term of president, the republicans had 23 senators and the democrats had but 7 senators from the south; when he retired from office, the republicans had but 5 senators and the democrats had 27 senators from the southern states.

"During the first two years of General Grant's term the republicans had a majority of 103 in the house of representatives, while during the last two years that he was president, the democrats had 80 majority.

As against the 97 democrats and 90 republicans from the north during the last two years that General Grant was president, there are now in congress from the same states excepting 4 members yet to be elected from California 125 republicans, and but 50 democrats."

The above statistics are certainly worth something. It is not right to blame Grant for all our disasters, but it is a matter of history that he could not prevent them. It has not yet appeared that there are any voters now in favor of Grant who were not in favor of him in 1874. Though we have always believed in General Grant's integrity, yet it is true that through his friends he was identified with the most disgraceful scandals of 1869-77. In the campaign of 1880 we do not want the republican party so identified with the corrupt revelations of 1873-4, as to give another Waterloo like that of 1874. The political struggles of the past three years have tended to greatly strengthen the republican party. And by nominating a candidate, and by forming a platform with reference to the issues raised during this period, we may confidently hope to win a victory in 1880.

And where it will stay.

The Denver and Rio Grande is on top again. Just where it ought to be. Register-Call.

We published a few days ago a statement in regard to the formation of the republican party. It seems that Michigan claims that the republican party was organized in that state July 6, or thirteen days before the meeting of the convention in Massachusetts. This view is supported by Henry Wilson in his "Rise and Fall of the Slave Power in America." As the date and manner of our birth must be interesting to all republicans we republish the following from Mr. Wilson's book:

But whatever suggestions may have been made or whatever action may have been taken elsewhere, to Michigan belongs the honor of being the first state to form and christen the republican party. More than three months before the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill the Free Soil convention had adopted a mixed ticket, made of Free-soilers and Whigs, in order that there might be a combination of all the anti-slavery elements of the state. Immediately on the passage of the Nebraska bill, Joseph Warren, editor of the Detroit Tribune, entered upon a course of measures that resulted in bringing the Whig and Free-soil parties together, not by a mere coalition of the two, but by a fusion of the elements of which the two were composed. In Mr. Warren's own language, he took ground in favor of disbanding the Whig and Free-soil parties and of the organization of a new party, composed of all the opponents of slavery extension. Among the first steps taken toward the accomplishment of this vitally-important object was the withdrawal of the Free-soil ticket. This preliminary purpose having been effected, a call was issued by him, to which the names of more than 10,000 citizens of Michigan were procured, for a mass convention. On the 6th day of July, 1854, the convention met in the city of Jackson in pursuance of this call and was very largely attended.

"A platform, drawn by the Hon. Jacob M. Howard, afterward United States senator from Michigan, was adopted, not only opposing the extension of slavery, but declaring in favor of its abolition in the District of Columbia. The report also proposed 'republican' as the name of the new party, which was adopted by the convention. Kinsley S. Bingham was nominated by the convention as the 'republican' candidate for governor, and was triumphantly elected, and the state of Michigan, for the first time in a quarter of a century, arrayed herself against the pro-slavery democracy. The state, thus early, and, indeed, the first to array herself under the banner of republicanism as a distinctive organization, has always remained steadfast to its publicly announced principles of faith."

A Common Sense and Independent View.

We understand that Judge Miller will be in Denver in the course of a week or so, and it would seem that Judge Hallett's best way would be to delay action until his arrival, and then by consultation with Judge Miller take up and dispose of all the cases now before the court. If a writ of restitution should now be granted there might be more trouble about the turning over of the property, and though it might turn out, in deciding some of the other cases, that the lease was void, or the terms of it had been violated or some decision upon some other point might make it necessary to turn the property over again to the D. & R. G.

To avoid the possibility of the collisions, which such orders might evoke, we think it would be better to hold this matter in abeyance, until all the cases can be decided. If such a course should be pursued, the A. T. & S. F. might complain that it was giving their opponents the benefit of their present advantage, illegally obtained, but the state has some rights in the matter, and its peaceable law abiding citizens do not want their lives and property jeopardized by the contention of two such powerful corporations, who are flooding the land with armed men. Let, if possible, the whole case be decided at one time, and in whose ever favor that decision may be, let the mandate be obeyed.—Saguache Chronicle.

Tally.

In the railroad controversy which has attracted so much attention, Colorado's legal talent has come brilliantly to the fore. Judge Reed of this city has especially distinguished himself. He has shown a wide acquaintance with law and a masterly ability in interpreting it, which has assisted the Santa Fe case to a very marked degree. He has been aided by Messrs. Willard Teller and C. E. Gast, of Pueblo, in a very marked degree. Tribune.

A Plucky Servant Girl.

In the Wisconsin last evening was made brief mention of the arrest of Dr. Herman Roese, whose personal possessions, when taken into custody, proved that he has regularly followed the calling of professional sneak-thief and burglar. The "Doctor," by his card, offered to the Police station keeper when the ceremony of "booking" was being gone through with, gave information that he was Dr. Herman Roese, that his business office was at No. 417 Wells street, and that he was a specialist physician and a manufacturer of patent medicines.

A few days since the boarding house of Mrs. Grove was visited by Roese, who at once went to the room of a lodger named Roussopol, a pocket-book peddler, using a key to unlock the door, and soon afterward departed. The man on his return home missed a large amount of his stock, and informing the landlady of his loss, it was learned from a servant girl that the room had been entered as described by a person supposed by her to be an old acquaintance of Roussopol. The girl was sure she could identify the fellow, and yesterday afternoon she saw him in the street, and seized him in a vigorous grasp, and hung frantically and pluckily on until police officers took the fellow in charge. Upon being searched at the police station Roese was found to have in his possession a large lot of skeleton keys in all designs, and other burglar outfit besides a quantity of stolen plunder. The arrest is one of notable importance, and all credit is due to the plucky servant girl, Henrietta Krueger by name. The following property found among the "Doctor's" effects has been identified and reclaimed to-day: Rings and locket, by Matilda Heiden; locket, by Mrs. Thierbach; ear rings, breastpin, bed-spread, table-spread, and tidies, by Mr. Koenig of the Clifton House; pocket book, by Henry Wellheim; silver watch, by Henry Hoyer; silver watch and chain, by Oswald Reichel.

Roese is a native of the city of Berlin, and his father a minister of the gospel. He posses an excellent education, and claims to hold a diploma showing that he is a medical graduate. He stated this morning that he never committed a theft previous to coming hither. Here he got hard up, and, seeing an opportunity, stole some articles of value. Other thefts followed, and he rapidly drifted into a career of theft and burglary. The skeleton keys found upon his person he claims to have made himself. Milwaukee Wisconsin.

John Newton.

At one time he gave nearly his whole time to spiritual study and meditation, was much in prayer and fasting, and carried his scrupulosity so far as hardly to answer a question for fear of speaking an idle word. This state of mind, in and after and wiser mood, he denounounced as "gloomy, stupid, unsociable, and useless." A chance perusal of "Shaftesbury's Characteristics" easily led him to adopt skeptical opinions. Human affection then came into play, and for the love of Mary Catlett, then in her fourteenth year, he abandoned his ship, was pressed into the royal navy, became a lieutenant, deserted, was re-captured and degraded to the rank of common seaman. He then exchanged into a merchant ship on her way to the coast of Africa. Here, to use his own words he became "exceedingly vile." He became the overseer of a slave depot on the "Gold Coast," and sank into a bondage little, if any, better than the slaves themselves. He next became a partner in a slave depot, and "began to be wretch enough to think himself happy, in the language of the country the white man was becoming black." Rescued by a friend of his family, not without unwillingness on his part, from this degraded and degrading position, he became a master mariner, and made four voyages in this capacity. With a placidity equal to that of Whitfield, and which even the horrors of the middle passage could not disturb, he tells us that he experienced, in his last voyage to Guinea "sweeter and more frequent hours of divine communion than he had ever elsewhere known;" he at another time said, "no employment afforded greater advantages to an awakened mind than the command of a slave ship." During the time occupied by these four voyages the religious impressions of his early life revived. His marriage with the object of his early attachment also tended to reclaim him from his vicious habits. While absent from home he mixed much with religious society in the West Indies, and in North America. There he met Whitfield, whose "ministry was exceedingly useful to him." Compelled by ill health to give up a seafaring life, he became a landing waiter in the custom house at Liverpool. His leisure hours were devoted to study. He became able to read the Scriptures in the original Greek and Latin, made himself acquainted "with the writers in divinity," at least in his estimation, in Latin, French, and English." The result of these studies and of Whitfield's ministrations was a fixed resolve to "find a public opportunity to testify the riches of divine grace, thinking that he was, above most living, a fit person to proclaim that faithful saying that Christ Jesus came into the world to save the chief of sinners." The Westminster Review.

A New Poem by Chatterton.

During the demolition of some old houses in Brooke street, Holborn, a collection of newspapers, periodicals, &c., of the dates 1765-70, was discovered among a quantity of lumber, and disposed of as "waste" at one of the shops in the neighborhood. Among the packages thus sold a manuscript was found, and on examination a dramatic poem in blank verse was brought to light, numbering some eight hundred lines, and perfect with the exception of the first few pages, which, however, apparently only contained the title and possibly dedication. The poem is signed with the capital C of the Saxon alphabet, and it is now believed that it is from the pen of the unfortunate Chatterton, who committed suicide in a house in Brooke street in 1770. The poem deals with love and revenge, is laid in the second Charles's days, and abounds in many striking passages. The manuscript is now in the hands of Lord Houghton, who is of opinion with Dean Stanley, Mr. Swinburne, and other men of letters, that the manuscript is genuine. Arrangements are being made for its publication at an early date. N. Y. World.

Some Turkish Crimes

An elderly Christian woman earned a livelihood for her infirm husband and numerous family by acting as a broker for the sale of jewelry in the harems of the wealthier class of Mussulmans. One day she was told to take all the jewels she had for sale to a house where she had occasionally been employed in her calling. Her husband accompanied her to the door of the harem, and said he would wait there for her, as he had been in the habit of doing. After he had stood at the door for several hours, he knocked, and three negresses appeared; and he asked them to tell his wife to come to him. They denied that his wife had come to the house that day, and treated him as a madman. He went home, hoping that she had, unseen by the black slaves, left the harem by some other door, and gone to their own house, but nothing had been heard of her there. For several days he went about the town inquiring for her without success. At last he happened to meet in the street the youngest of the three negresses whom he had seen at the Turkish house, a girl of 15. She stopped him, saying she was sorry for him, than she would tell him the whole truth; and then she related how her mistress had taken his wife into a room where there was a trap-door opening above a deep vault, and there asked her to show the jewels she had brought. They were carefully examined, and placed on a divan. Her mistress then, with the help of the two other female slaves, pushed the poor woman into the vault, and closed the door over her. All this the girl said she had seen, and she added that they had heard his wife's cries until late at night, and supposed that she must then have died from the effects of her fall. In the morning, she continued, the body was taken out by a small staircase leading down to the vault from the court-yard, and buried in the garden, by the same black slaves. Armed with this statement, the husband laid an accusation against both the Turkish lady and her two negresses. The tribunal ordered a domciliary visit to the house, but nothing was found that could inculpate any one. He then applied for the summoning of the young negress to give evidence, but she was not summoned, and no trial took place, the husband of the lady being high in office, rich, and influential, which were three good reasons for screening his wife from justice. The jewels obtained by this abominable crime were worth £800, and their different owners, who had merely intrusted them to the murdered woman for sale, never heard more of them, though it is believed that the president and members of the tribunal had been requested, not without compliance, to select a few of them for the use of their harems. Fraser's Magazine.

Prices of Wild Animals in England.

Lions or tigers, £80 each; pumas, £30; leopards, £20; cheetahs, £40; black panthers, £150; clouded tigers, £300; jaguars, 30 to £50; ocelots, 5 to £10; Viverrine cats, £10; servals, £4; lynx, 5 to £15; hyenas, 12 to £30; Aard wolf, 40 to £100; civet cats, 2 to £10; parndoxines, 2 to £5; ichneumons, £25; wolf, 5 to £10; silver fox, £10; coatimundis, or raccoons, £2; Polar bears, £25; brown bears, £40; Syrian or black bears, £12; Japanese or Himalayan bears, £15; sloths, £10; beavers, £40 the pair; porcupines, £6 each; agouti, £2. A rhinoceros costs from 400 to £1,000; the one now in stock is a young one, and worth about £500; it feeds, the attendant told us, on "sloppy food," which Mr. Jamrach interpreted to mean pig-wash, and passes a serene existence in confinement, dividing its time between consuming as much as it can hold and going to sleep. Elephants are cheaper in this country than in India, an African elephant being now only worth about £60, and an Indian elephant from 150 to £300. Indian tapirs cost about £150, and the South American specimens from 30 to £40; a llama or nylgherie will fetch 30 to £40, and a zebra is worth from 100 to £150; while kangaroos are sold at from 10 to £60 the pair. Monkeys vary much in price, ranging from the tiny marmoset at £1 to the chimpanzee, or orang outang at £100. Most of the animals enumerated above might be found somewhat inconvenient in a private menage, but birds are more manageable pets. Those who fancy them may purchase Australian finches, wimbles, Tasmanian devils, &c., at from 8s. to £2 a pair; while parrots, parroquets, lories, &c., range from 8s. to £50 the pair. Saturday Review.

The Good Horse—The Tipsy Rats.

A friend of mine is employed on a farm near Toronto, Ontario, where a horse belonging to the wife of the farmer is never required to work, but is allowed to live the life of a gentleman, for the following reason: Some years ago the lady abovementioned fell off a plank bridge into a stream where the water was deep. The horse, which was feeding in a field close by, ran to the spot and held her up with his teeth till assistance arrived, thus probably saving her life. Was this reason or instinct? Again, a gentleman engaged in the business of distilling at Cincinnati has more than once told me that the rats in his distillery are in the habit of drinking any spirits spilled on the ground or left in open vessels, and that they often become in consequence, so tipsy that they cannot run, and are easily taken by hand. Which is this?—Nature.

PROPRIETORS.

REV. JOSEPH ADAMS, MRS. J. A. D. ADAMS, Homœpathic Physician, and MR. G. K. HARTENSTEIN, Attorney at Law, Leadville.

The Springs are situated at the mouth of Cottonwood Cañon, in a most beautiful country, salubrious atmosphere, surrounded by scenery of the most gorgeous description, being in the very heart of the Saguache range—Mount Yale lying to the north, and Mount Princeton to the south. The crystal waters of the Cottonwood River, abundant with trout, come dashing and sparkling down past the door of the Sanitarium from its fountain head, the eternal beds of snow which cap the hoary old mountain.

The following analysis, connected with six years' experience, warrant us in saying that they are a specific for catarrh, sore eyes, rheumatism, lead poisons, and all scrofulous affections:

The Court House officials are agitated over a box of cigars. It is said by some that a wager was made, and others deny the assertion. An investigation is talked of.

The candy factory operated by "Joe" and "Sam" in a tent, near the National House, did a large business yesterday. We ate some of the candy, and found it good.

Our city band goes to Pueblo this morning to play for the state convention of colored Masons. This is a compliment to our musicians, as Pueblo and Denver bands offered to play for less money than the Colorado Springs boys.

While College matters are progressing so finely, we would suggest that the trees, newly planted on the campus, be boxed to prevent their being blown down, they now slant in every direction, and that water be turned on for their benefit.

It was on Monday last when a rich strike was made by a prospector close to the town of Labor City (Chalk Ranch). In making the survey for the claim, the lines were run so as to take in all the buildings, and pretty much the entire town site of the city of Tabor.

A young blacksmith in West Denver is a musical prodigy. He don't know one note from another, yet is able to execute som of the most difficult passages on the piano or organ. His touch is light but firm, and his rough fingers possess remarkable elasticity.

The lad who has been discovered by sensational correspondents in Leadville to be the young prince, Charlie Ross, is now a newsboy in the Carbonate City. He says he don't care a blank whether he is Charley Ross or not, so long as he can make a stake selling newspapers.

By reference to the business locals it will be seen that Mr. L. K. Oldroyd, the well known Huerfano Street Photographer, has added to his excellent gallery a new back ground, representing the gateway to the Garden of the Gods. He has secured the services of Mr. Frank A. Nims, from the Academy of Design, New York, and Mr. J. Slinn, a portrait painter, has located his studio in Mr. Oldroyd's gallery.

Mr. Rudd, in shooting at what he thought was a strange cat, found after it was too late that his own cat had changed places with the stranger while he had gone to get his revolver, and the result was he sent a bullet through the shoulder of his own pet. Some sharper, acting in the absence of Mr. Bergh, fined Mr. Rudd $100, by extracting that sum from the pocket of the would be assassin while taking a short sleep in his office. Canon City Record.

Friday night some thief stole two ponies, saddles, bridles, and lariats from near Mr. W. H. Granger's residence in the northern part of town. The ponies were the property of Dan and Charlie Granger, aged respectively fourteen and eight years, and were used by the boys in herding cattle. Everyone who has heard of the theft expresses the liveliest sympathy with the little fellows and the hope that the animals may be recovered with the lariats tangled round the necks of the thieves.

It may be coping to the sufferers by the severe hot spell now raging down on earth to know that up here in Leadville this morning, June 20th, men were out skating on the ice. This is a literal fact. At 5 o'clock this morning ice was formed over the ditches above the smelting works sufficiently thick to hold up a heavy man and allow him to slide. Just for the name of it a couple of men, both of whom will make affidavit if doubted, skated several times back and forward over the ice, which they judged was nearly half an inch thick. Chronicle.

Personal.

Dr. J. A. Hart went up to Denver on business last evening.

The Hon. Roderick Quinby of Colorado City, went east yesterday.

Mr. James Wilson, an old citizen of Colorado Springs, now manager of the Union Stockyards at St. Louis, left town yesterday for a brief sojourn in Denver.

Mr. J. B. Stutevant, one of the most prominent wool manufacturers in the United States, is in the city visiting his niece Mrs. W. H. Macomber.

Ohio is to be nearly orphaned during the next month. Upwards of two hundred of her brilliant editors are about to bid farewell to violent scenes of daily and weekly strife to enjoy nature in repose in the wilds of Colorado. They will visit the Garden of the Gods and the Geysers and the Mormons, and take a peek at Pike's Peak, and perhaps a subterranean view of the silver mines of Nevada. They will meet at Cincinnati in convention to-day, and after two days of junketing in the pretty paradox of America they will shoot off on Friday morning for St. Louis. The Journal will be represented as it should be on great occasions. Dayton (O.) Journal.

The editors left St. Louis last Monday morning for the west. They will stop a day or two in Kansas City.

Botany.

The success of the College botany class has led Professor Jones to undertake to organize a second class, beginning July 2d. Persons wishing to join the class should notify him at once.

The time will be devoted largely to the analysis of wild flowers.

Is it the Same Old Safe?

In 1865 a great flood overwhelmed Denver. The usually insignificant Cherry creek rose until it become a river. The flood continued for two days, and Cherry creek, joining its forces with the Platte, become a foaming lake.

The people of Denver left their houses and sought shelter on the hills and elevations overlooking the town. When the flood subsided, which it was several days in doing, that portion of the town nearest the treacherous little stream was found to have suffered almost utter destruction. Among the buildings swept away was a portion of the little wooden court house where all the business of Arapahoe county was then transacted. The system governing the public and private interests of the little town was necessarily imperfect at that early day and it happened that in consequence of the general feeling of insecurity naturally entertained by the citizens of a little isolated mountain town, they (the citizens) had stored the title deeds to their property and other documents, and objects considered of value, in the great safe belonging to the county and kept in the little court house on the banks of the creek. The flood demolished the court house and when the waters had receded, there was no sign of the safe anywhere to be found. The floor upon which it rested was gone, except fragments of it that remained attached to the timbers of the building. The theory generally adopted was that the floor had been torn from the building by the force of the flood, and drifted with the safe upon it down the creek, and perhaps into the Platte, with which the stream connects. The greatest excitement prevailed when the disappearance of the safe became generally known, and nearly the whole town was directly and personally interested. The affairs of the county were thrown into great confusion, as the books, records and annals of finished and unfinished business, was all in the safe. On behalf of the citizens, whose title deeds and other documents were stored in the safe, the authorities offered a reward of from $300 to $500 for the recovery of the iron depository.

Search was made everywhere, the river and the creek were dragged but no safe was found. All this happened fourteen years ago. Last Saturday, says the Tribune, Mr. Jacob N. Best found the safe; that is he asserts that he found it. Mr. Best refuses to give any particulars about the discovery of the safe, and even insists on keeping the place where he found it to himself. He says he discovered it while in a boat with some companions. The way in which they settled the question of what it might be was by feeling down along its sides which were buried in sand. Further information he refuses to give until he is assured by the authorities that the reward offered for its recovery fourteen years ago will be paid him. It is evidently in some ordinarily inaccessible spot, as he defiantly invites the town to pole or drag the river for it. He says that he has assured himself that it is the identical safe for which the reward was offered, as none other has since been lost in the city, or between the city and the Missouri. It has been suggested to us that this story is a romance. What of that? We think it safe and best to relate it.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

The Atchison Party Loom Up.

A Blood and Thunder Extra.

What Judge Hallett's Order Means.

Many a Slip Between the Cup and Lip.

BONFIRE GAST ON THE DECISION.

SOUTH PUEBLO, June 23.

Special to the Gazette:

Bonfire Gast sent a telegram to the Chieftain about noon to-day, and the proprietors of that enterprising sheet accomplished the herculean task of publishing an extra. The entire mechanical and editorial force of the office was pressed into service, and by five o'clock the steaming paper was being distributed to the anxious multitude in waiting on the crowded streets. During the preparation of this stupendous bombshell all other business in Pueblo was suspended, and the public rejoicing over the victory of the Santa Fe still continues. The celebration of the Fourth of July has been anticipated and the options that were bottled for that occasion are now popping out like champagne corks. The following is a verbatim copy of the extra aforesaid, which is telegraphed that your readers may see how carefully the Chieftain and its correspondents adhere to the truth:

THE CHIEFTAIN, EXTRA.

[Rooster.]

"COULDN'T WE HAVE A FEW BONFIRES?"

LIGHT UP THE "LAVA BEDS OF HELL."

LET OUR COUNTY OFFICIALS LOOK OUT.

Special to the Chieftain:

DENVER, June 23, 1879.

Judges Hallett and Miller rendered separate concurring opinions. They spoke with great feeling and vehemence. They say everything done under Bowen's writ was void. The proceedings were a disgrace, and the officers should now consider whether they have not brought upon themselves very serious consequences.

The Rio Grande is ordered to restore possession to the Santa Fe, and must respond to the order in three days. If it is found that the receiver has possession, court will take care of him afterwards. Judge Miller says that the authority of the federal court must be respected, and that he, as justice of the supreme court of the United States, will see that it is done.

Yum, yum!

THE DECISION BY JUDGE HALLETT.

As may be seen in our dispatches, Judge Hallett yesterday issued an order of restitution against the D. & R. G. Co. The news was variously interpreted on its arrival in this city. We found at the Denver & Rio Grande office, the utmost quiet and confidence. From every appearance, such an order had been expected.

On the street, there was a different state of feeling. The Atchison officials were walking up and down our streets with beaming countenances, and saying a telegram had been received here which said "Hallett decides that the A., T. & S. F. must be put in possession of the road." The ex-agent and his assistants confidently asserted that they would be in possession by this morning at least.

As there seems to be much misapprehension in regard to the character and effect of the writ we will add some explanation of the dispatch on our first page. First it should be noticed that the writ of restitution is issued against the Denver and Rio Grande Co. But the company has not possession of the road and of course cannot give up what it does not possess. The question that naturally arises is what effect will this order have on the possession by the receiver. There has been considerable confusion on this point because it has been thought by some parties that the D. & R. G. Co. turned the road over to the receiver and that his title comes through the D. & R. G. Co. But this is not true. It comes from Judge Bowen in another suit to which the A., T. & S. F. is not a party.

THE DIVIDE SPEAKS.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

MONUMENT, June 21st.

The people of this town have had enough of the Banana Line, and their sympathies are wholly with the pioneer road. So complete a revulsion of feeling has taken place in the last six weeks that your correspondent does not know of a single Santa Fe man in the place or vicinity. We have had several illustrations of the utter indifference of the Kansas corporation to the interests of our people—among others the raising of freight charges between here and Denver from 75 to 100 per cent., e. g. fourth class freight from Denver to Monument was raised from 30 to 46 cents; first class from 45 to 70 cents, while on furniture and many other articles we were charged $1.40 per 100 pounds. Our people have also found out that it is much easier to run down to your place and get their accounts for stock killed or material furnished adjusted than to wait indefinitely on a corporation whose principal office is five hundred miles away in another state. While we do not pretend to fathom the legal intricacies of the dispute between the D. & R. G. and Atchison roads it is generally believed that it is impossible to dispossess the owner of property when in peaceable possession of the same.

NARROW GAUGE.

The suit under which the road passed into the hands of a receiver was brought by the sole surviving trustee of the road. When the road was built a mortgage was executed to certain trustees to secure the bondholders. According to the terms of the mortgage, the trustee could foreclose the mortgage whenever there should be a default in interest. There has been such a default, and in response to the request of the trustee, Judge Bowen took the road away from the D. & R. G. Company and put it in the hands of a receiver. Here it will remain until the creditors of the road ask for a change. Judge Miller stated on the bench on Tuesday that Judge Bowen's court and Judge Hallett's court had concurrent jurisdiction, and the court which first took possession of the road would hold it. As Judge Miller will probably be on the bench when answer is made that the Denver and Rio Grande Company have not possession, but that it is in the hands of a receiver appointed by Judge Bowen, this will probably end the matter.

The dispatch says no force is to be used. The marshal will probably serve the writ on Colonel Dodge who will say that the road is in the hands of a receiver. This answer will be carried to Judge Hallett and here the matter will rest for the present.

AN ORDER.

In view of the writ issued by Judge Hallett the following order was issued by the receiver to the employes:

DENVER, June 23.

All Agents and Employes D. & R. G. Railway:

The orders of the court this day made do not relate to, or interfere with the possession of the undersigned as receiver of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway. All employes will continue in the regular discharge of their duties.

Per H. A. RISLEY
D. C. DODGE, Receiver.
Gen'l Manager.

Colorado College.

Passing the College grounds on Saturday, we were glad to see men busy at work putting up the rafters of the building. The stone work is nearly completed, and no more delays are apprehended. Those engaged in the prosecution of this enterprise need no urging from us. Being in a position to carry it forward, they are doing so with all vigor.

We are especially glad that they have decided to invite the people to a public gathering on the 4th, to promote the interests of the College. In our opinion, the whole community should be awake to the importance of building up in this place a broad, liberal, and substantial institution of learning. A large immigration is pouring into the state, wealth is accumulating, new towns are being planted, and old ones are growing faster than ever before, and it needs no prophet to tell us that unless institutions of advanced instruction are at once founded, society will recede rather than advance. The pursuit of wealth threatens to be engrossing, and we must create counter influences, and do so at once. Permanent residents here have great interests at stake in this matter. They have brought with them the culture of the east, but where will their children obtain suitable education if they do not furnish them the facilities? Parents will hardly discharge their duty to their sons if they encourage them to go to the mines and the ranches, and do not prepare for them educational privileges that shall fit them to bear a part in molding the future society of this state.

Moreover, we confess that we have a strong local feeling regarding it. Northern Colorado had several years the start of the southern portions of the state; but our scenery is as fine, our resources are as great, and our population is to be as numerous as theirs. We ought certainly to determine that our character as intelligent, enterprising and educated communities shall challenge comparison with theirs. Where the state capital shall be, or what special points shall be business centers we cannot decide, but we can create here an intellectual centre that shall be known and acknowledged as such not only in the state, but far beyond its limits. The towns of Amherst, Massachusetts, Oberlin, Ohio, and Beloit, Wisconsin, were not important as towns till the colleges in them made them so, and now they all stand pre-eminent in their fame and influence.

Colorado Springs is universally admitted to be remarkable both for its beauty and the numbers of its cultivated citizens; but its beauty alone will not give it a wide influence. Its culture, if not sustained, will be less in the next generation. Increasing business it will doubtless have; but it will lose something of this to towns nearer the mines. The advantage of our position and the tastes of our people open to us one career in which we can have no rivals. Somewhere in this state there will be a seat of learning that shall be to the whole Rocky mountain region what Yale or Harvard is to New England, why may it not be this place? A beginning has already been made. An elegant building for college purposes is already reared, and we learn that enlarged plans for the development of the college are laid.

We believe the institution rests upon the right basis. It is independent of church and state.—It is christian, but not sectarian. All, we think, will yield a hearty assent to its platform as laid down by Prof. Bliss in his sermon last Sabbath at the Baptist church.

He said: "The projectors of this college intend to serve no one sect, but all sects alike. They will welcome to its board of trust judicious and worthy men of all shades of religious belief, and to its corps of instruction professors connected with all churches. They are christian men, they honor the divine government and word, and intend to make the spirit of the college reverent as well as scholarly, yet with the special and various tenets of christian doctrine they do not conceive it to be their duty to meddle. They wish to serve families in their desire to fit sons and daughters for lives of usefulness, society in its demand for good morals, high intelligence and the means of progress toward worthy ends. The churches by carrying well forward in scholastic courses the men who shall proclaim religious truth, and the entire community and state, by giving a thorough education to many men who shall administer, educational, political and judicial affairs.

In this work we bill the trustees and faculty God speed, and hope that our citizens will enter with spirit into all plans for promoting it.

The Price of Wool.

Messrs. Coates Brothers of Philadelphia, send us the following circular concerning wool. The current price for Colorado and New Mexican wools are annexed. Prices are again higher, and we note an advance since the first instant of about two cents per pound on most grades of fleece and unwashed. Wool is very scarce here and all so far received has met with quick sale at full market prices. The arrivals have been principally unwashed. So little washed has arrived that quotations for it are yet nominal. The prices being paid in the wool growing sections and the eagerness of manufacturers for supplies would seem to warrant present or perhaps higher values being maintained. Woolen goods have been in good request and many manufacturers have declined to sell their product at ruling values but in very few cases have they yet been able to obtain any material advance in price.

Some Colorado and New Mexico wools have been received and have met with quick sale at advanced rates, but the low grades of foreign wools which compete with the coarse carpet grades of this section, have not yet advanced materially and this will undoubtedly tend to keep the coarsest grade from going much higher. The more northern territory wools are in good request and would bring high figures if here now. Supplies from all sections come forward slowly and we do not expect to see wools accumulate in market until much later than usual, as manufacturers have so little stock that it will take some time to supply even their immediate wants.

Concerning New Mexico.

The mines and agricultural resources of New Mexico receive the attention of the Santa Fe Sentinel for June 19th and as the article contains some facts of interest to our readers we condense the article and present it as follows:

The great wealth of New Mexico, in the precious, as well as in many of the baser metals and stones, is every day becoming more and more an admitted fact.

Gold is known to exist in over fifty different localities in the Territory. Its and silver must have been known and extensively mined by the Aztecs, as the presence of their old ruins is said to be an almost unfailing indication of mines. The Spaniards mined gold, silver, and copper in this region, and Jesuit priests more thoroughly prospected it than it has been since. They reported at all points great riches, and the existence of all the precious metals. At the Placer Mountain, the Old and New Placer, quartz lodes have been opened since the war.

At Moreno mines, at Ute Creek, and other tributaries of the Cimarron and Red rivers, large deposits of gold have been discovered and worked.

At Pinos Altos, quartz gold-mining has received considerable attention. Thirty lodes were discovered, paying from forty to two hundred dollars per ton. In this district a few years ago thirty lodes of gold quartz were worked, ten of silver or a combination of silver and gold, and three of copper. There have been picked up in one day in a gulch at Pinos Altos ores of gold, silver, lead, zinc, magnetic iron, and plumbago. The number of mines now worked there has largely increased.

Twenty-seven miles from the city of Santa Fe is the Real de Dolores, or the Old Placer, discovered in the year 1833, and from that up to 1840 it contained a population varying from 2,000 to 3,000 persons, the most of whom were engaged in washing out gold, laboring under great disadvantage on account of the scarcity of water, it being necessary to carry the dirt to the water, a distance of nearly two miles, or pack water in kegs or barrels to the dirt; there were at one time some dozen or more stores there with merchandise; the amount of gold taken out by this rude process is variously estimated from $300,000 to $500,000 yearly. Many rich gold-bearing quartz lodes were discovered, but owing to the want of water and proper machinery were not worked to any extent.

The Real de San Francisco, ten miles south of Real de Dolores was discovered in 1840, and was considered much richer than that of Dolores, and was worked about six years, the miners laboring under the same difficulties as to water as occurred at the Dolores. There were over 5,000 people at this place at one time.

West from the Mesilla valley, the principal town in which are Mesilla, Las Cruces and Dona Ana, is the new and very flourishing mining town of Silver City. The mines were discovered in the locality in the year of 1870, and since then Silver City has been founded, and now has a population of nearly 3,000, the town containing, besides miners and mining establishments, lawyers, physicians, preachers, editors and so forth, and churches, school houses, printing offices and mercantile houses—some of the most handsome brick dwellings too, being found there. Most of the mines opened and worked in that section will sustain their reputation.

The soil of the valleys throughout the territory is a rich sandy loam, composed of the disintegrated matter of the older rocks and volcanic ashes. It is light and porous and of surprising fertility, corn, wheat, oats and barley grow well in all parts of the territory; corn is a staple product. The cereals do best in the northern district and elevated plateaus; corn, vegetables and all kinds of fruit do best in the valleys; corn, in the rich bottoms along the principal streams, if well cultivated only, is made to yield over 80 bushels per acre; wheat, on the uplands often yields over 50 bushels per acre. Farm lands in the Taos valley, and in the vicinity of Santa Fe, have been under cultivation over 200 years, and in all that time not one ounce of fertilizing material has been used to enrich them; yet, there is no perceptible diminution in crops. The valley of the Rio Grande del Norte, for 400 miles in length, averaging five miles in breadth, can all be irrigated with the turbid water of the stream from which its name is derived. This stream, like the Nile, is the sole reliance of the farmer, the water is turbid with sediment one-fifth of its weight at high water. At such times each irrigation is equal, if not superior to a coat of the richest fertilizer. El Paso valley has been cultivated in this way over 265 years.

Cabbage grow splendidly, often weighing from 30 to 60 pounds each. Onions also grow wonderfully large, weighing from one to two pounds each; those raised in the Raton Mountains are said to possess the finest flavor. Irish potatoes are grown in the northern districts, where they yield enormously. Sweet potatoes are raised in the Mesilla Valley, and at Fort Stanton, on the Rio Benito and Ruidoso, in Lincoln county.

Beets, radishes, turnips, parsnips and carrots, grow well everywhere. Beans, peas and tobacco are also grown successfully; beans to the native population are what the potato is to the Irish. Apples do well in almost all parts of the country. Peaches, pears and apricots do well from Bernalillo down; also on the Pecos from Anton Chico down; melons of all kinds grow to grand proportions, and of the most delicious flavor.

Not more than one-tenth of the valleys of the Rio Grande or Pecos are occupied or cultivated. The same may be said of an hundred other valleys and terraces along the large streams, and especially so of the higher plateaus.

In pastoral pursuits, New Mexico is almost without a rival. Within a few years she will be entirely so. Her plains and plateaus are a boundless extent of pasturage, covered with the most nutritious grasses, to the extent of feeding millions of sheep, cattle, and horses, her mild, equable climate, offering few rigors that are not obviated by ample shelter afforded by the canons and valleys projecting from the mountains.

The grasses of this country possess a peculiar tenacity to life. They survive through a succession of dry seasons, and when looking apparently dead, a few showers of rain will restore them to life and freshness. "It is said they change from a single shower." The grama and mesquit varieties commence curing in the early fall and though apparently dead, seem to preserve all their sweet, nutritious qualities. All kinds of stock thrive upon them, and cattle become almost as fat as if stall fed.
